Equine Cultures in Transition - Past, Present and Future Challenges

22-24 June 2021

Organizing committee

Petra Andersson is PhD in practical philosophy at the University of Gothenburg. Her current research is about horse welfare from different perspectives and also about the relationship between human and horse. One important question in her work is what we can learn about horses through our relationships and communication with them. Petra also teaches in animal ethics.

Susanna Hedenborg, professor in Sport Science, Malmö university and affiliated professor Norwegian School of Sport Sciences. She is the president of the Swedish research council for Sport Science. Hedenborg has, in several publications, presented studies on historical and gender perspectives in relation to equestrian sport. She is currently the head of two research projects regarding equestrianism and social media and stable activities for pre-school children in Sweden and Norway.

Susanne Lundesjö Kwart is a lecturer at the Division of Equine Studies at the Swedish University of Agricultural Sciences, and she teaches in pedagogics and didactics at the Equine Science Program. In April 2020, she defended her thesis focused on riding teachers pedagogical practice. Now she continues her research on the situation during riding lessons and how to teach the equestrian feel.

Gabriella Torell Palmquist work as a Head Teacher in Education at Ridskolan Strömsholm, one of the Swedish Equestrian Centers of Excellence. In 2017, Gabriella completed the dissertation Forward march! The Role of the Riding Instructor – past, present, future. Today she works in a research collaboration focusing riding school activities for preschool children.
