

PhD Project: Jens Blomquist

The effect of liming on yield and aggregate stability in clay soils

The main aim of the project is to evaluate the effect of different liming products on crop yield and aggregate stability in clay soils. The research work will mainly be carried out in field experiments with supplementary laboratory studies. The results of the studies are intended to provide farmers with tools for amelioration of soil structure.