

Annex 2: Annual cycle for course and programme planning

A well-functioning planning cycle for education at first- and second-cycle level is crucial for activities at department, faculty and university level. The annual cycle is intended as a tool to clarify deadlines, roles and cooperation between activities and actors in a number of processes. This includes preparation of and decisions on the range of courses and programmes offered, programme and course syllabuses, programme size (number of places for new students) and resource allocation.

Education planning requires a long-term perspective. The annual cycle describes when various documents and decisions must be available in order to provide relevant information to students and departments. The annual cycle may need to be adjusted for degree programmes run jointly with another higher education institution.

The annual cycle is presented as two overview charts, one per function and one per process. There are also three charts showing different processes. Below are some terms and abbreviations used in the flowcharts.

Terms used in the annual cycle: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• AY1 – the current academic year</li><li>• AY2 – the year following the current academic year</li><li>• AY3 – the year following AY2</li></ul>	Abbreviations used in the flowcharts: PSR = programme director of studies ISR = department director of studies BY = budget year AY = academic year PN = programme board UN = Board of Education FN = faculty board PRG = programme group prog = programme if appl.=if applicable

The annual cycle is structured as follows:

- Planning – overview by function
- Planning – overview by process
- Simplified annual cycles by process
  - Course offering
  - Programme offering (new programme and new programme syllabus)
  - Meeting dates
  - Advertising courses and programmes linked to admission rounds

Short description of the administrative components of different processes in the annual cycle:

1. Programme offering process

In December, the programme boards decide on proposals for changes to the offering for AY3, including the number of places for new HE entrants. In February, the Board of Education decides on proposed changes to the programme offering. In April, the faculty boards and programme boards submit opinions. In May, the Board of Education adopts its proposal for the AY2 programme offering, and in June the vice-chancellor takes the final decision.

2. Funding and budget process

In connection with the UN's May decision on a proposed programme offering, they also submit a proposal to the vice-chancellor on the number of places for new entrants in AY3; this is based on proposals from the programme boards. In September, the UN submits a proposal for the allocation of funds per programme board and in October, a final proposal is presented to the SLU Board. In September, the programme boards approve data for the allocation of funds to PRG/course (departments). In October, the UN finalises a proposal for the allocation of funds for undergraduate and Master's courses and programmes. In October, the programme boards decide on a proposed allocation of funds for undergraduate and Master's courses and programmes. In November, the SLU Board decides on the allocation of funds and in December, deans decide on the allocation for each department.

3. New programme process

Establishing a new programmes can be viewed as two cycles – one long cycle where an idea is proposed that requires plenty of revision, and a shorter cycle for proposals that are well-developed and in principle ready to be submitted as a programme syllabus proposal. Both cycles are completed in the same way in spring.

Long cycle: The Board of Education meets in May to discuss new programmes in connection with proposing the range of programmes to be offered. The board also discusses ideas for new programmes, and if they are promising, the board can assign someone to continue working on the proposal during autumn. During its meeting in February, the Board of Education presents the programme proposal(s) and syllabus(es) for discussion based on the aspects defined in Section 11.3 of the Education Planning and Administration Handbook.

Short cycle: If a proposal for a new programme is well prepared, with a finalised syllabus, the programme board can decide by December whether to submit the proposal to the Board of Education's February meeting. Here too, the proposal must address the issues and aspects defined in Section 11.3 of the Education Planning and Administration Handbook.

If the proposal is approved during the Board of Education's February meeting, all programme boards and faculty boards are invited to submit opinions on it (otherwise, it is either re-submitted for further processing or rejected). The programme boards and faculty boards give their opinions at the April meeting. At the Board of Education's May meeting, the members discuss the opinions submitted on the proposed programme and its syllabus. They also propose the range of programmes offered in AY3, where the new programme may be included. At this meeting, the programme syllabus for Master's programmes taught in English is also approved (students can apply to these programmes from 1 October).

4. Programme syllabus process

As the UN May meeting decides on new programmes, the syllabuses for these are also discussed. Decisions on programme syllabuses are taken in May.

The programme boards approve course syllabuses for new courses (including course instances) in November, and the annual revision of programme syllabuses is done in connection with this. To avoid unclarities, an extra sentence should be included in decisions on course syllabuses stating that programme syllabuses must be updated to reflect all changes to course syllabuses and course instances.

5. Process course offering – schedule (course instance) and syllabuses

Schedule preparation starts in January/February and continues throughout spring. The programme board discusses schedule proposals in April. At its May/June meeting, the programme boards decide on the schedule for AY3. If there are any issues, preparation can continue to September when the programme boards take the final decision on schedules (no later than 30 September).

Once the schedule is approved in June, the departments/course coordinators, together with the programme directors of studies, can begin working on course syllabuses. Course syllabuses, course instances, course coordinators and examiners must be entered in the courses and programmes database by 30 October.

Course modules must be registered in Ladok no later than 31 May for autumn semester courses, and no later than 30 November for spring semester courses.
